It's been 35 years since I was in a class at the Educational Alliance (as a pre-schooler!) but I have continued to live in the neighborhood ever since, enjoyed many EA programs, and have seen changes to the community in ways that I could not have imagined. One way that it certainly should not change is by curtailing art school programs. Art and arts education should not be reserved only for the wealthy. The EA has a critical mission in continuing to provide arts education.
