

Diana M. Carulli

New York City is in danger of losing its status as an art capital of the world because of the disrespect it has for the living and working requirements of its artists. Increasingly artists are leaving New York to seek better conditions in other states. Ultimately, it will devalue your real estate to participate in this trend.