

Ellen Lauter

The art school serves more than just the Lower East Side population. It has one of the only welding studios in NYC and has nurtured artists since the early 20th century. Why destroy the beauty of the light offered to the art students who return semester after semester to take the wonderful and affordable classes at the EA and relegate what classes to the ground floor? Why do you insist upon changing what has worked for almost 100 years?