The Art School was always the first place I "showed off" to friends who would visit with me. It was the beginning of their orientation to the significant and important history of The Educational Alliance. Two of these friends have studied at other art studios. Both were in awe of the windows allowing for the great amount of natural light. Telling me what such natural light meant to them, as artists, was an eye-opener for me. I've never looked at those windows in the same way since. One of these artists - a sculptor - immediately became a student of the Art School and has not missed going, weekly, for the past 9 years! I cannot imagine a comparable space elsewhere in the building.
