

K. Webster

Right across the street is a Parks building in Seward Park that sits without a community purpose. Why not ask the Board to look into Parks allowing the space to be used for arts programming while the renovation takes place? The Board could offer to pay some minimal "rent" (it's a public building) and offer some programming to the public for the duration of the renovation.