

Marianne Giosa

The arts are an absolutely necessary and vital part of child development. This is not an emotional statement but one that is well grounded in research. Destroying a child's access to creativity is destroying the future problem solvers of this world. The rational mind thinks that only through mathematics and science does reason come about. This is absolutely wrong, and not so. Without creativity the world's greatest leaders would not exist